FLUSHING NOT PRACTICABLE

Superintendent Says Practice of Cleaning Streets by Recourse to Fire Hydrants Has Been Generally Discontinued.

In his report on an improved method of cleaning the city, Superintendent Henry J. Cohn, of the Street Cleaning Department, suggests to the Administrative Board that the city be divided into six sections, instead of four, as was proposed by Commissioner Hirschberg, and that the buildings at the State Fair Grounds be used only temporarily as headquarters for the street cleaning force of the western half of the city.

Gentlemen: The resolution offered in your honorable body proposing certain changes or reorganization of the department of street cleaning, with certain routing of teams, and in reply thereto beg leave to say that, in my judgment, an upward of six teams would be required, but not determined as to the advisability of selecting the State Fair Grounds as the most suitable location.

RICHMOND GRAYS HOLD FIRST BATTALION DRILL

Infantrymen Are Hosts to 1,500 People at Brilliant Ball in Armory. The Richmond Grays' Battalion, First Infantry, held its first full dress drill last night in its armory, Seventh and Marshall Streets. Following the drill, a military ball was held, the dancing lasting until midnight. All forty of the company participated in the drill, which was the first battalion drill since the summer encampment. The drill was followed by an exhibition by the Signal Corps, which erected a field wireless outfit on the armory floor and put it into actual operation. While the aerials were being put up by one detachment, other men were running through the flag signals, and still others were demonstrating the acetylene gas lanterns used at night and others operated the combination telephone and telegraph field apparatus. The dance which followed the drill was one of the most elaborate of the season. At least 1,500 persons were present, and several hundred couples were on the floor at one time. Both of the large balconies were crowded with spectators until late in the night. Music was furnished by Kesslich's Municipal Band. The chaperons were Mrs. B. Valentine, Mrs. George Ben Johnston, Mrs. W. M. Habbistron, Mrs. Stuart Cooke, Mrs. Woodson P. Wadley, Mrs. Thomas B. McDams, Mrs. Douglas Vanderhoff, Mrs. Frank D. AMERICAN NATIONAL SEES BETTER CONDITIONS AHEAD

Predicts Restoration of Confidence With Opening of Cotton and Stock Exchanges.

LABOR OUTLOOK IS BETTER

Many Factories Operating at Capacity and Some Working Twenty-Four Hours a Day—Federal Reserve Banks Help.

Trade barriers are being removed one by one and business conditions are gradually being adjusted, according to the business forecast and general letter on trade conditions for the month of December, issued by the American National Bank, of Richmond. The next move in the restoration of confidence and the opening of the wheels of business, it is predicted, will be the opening of the stock and cotton exchanges. The letter deplores the fact that because of conditions during the past few months many American manufacturers are not now in a position to accept orders which are being offered them by brokers representing nations now at war. It is pointed out that many orders have been declined because of the probability of the manufacturer's inability to deliver the goods within a specified time. The prediction is made that legislation will be passed which will tend to hinder a return to normal business, the administration having pledged itself to favor legislation which could in any way disturb business.

FORESEES IMPROVEMENT IN LABOR CONDITIONS

An improvement in conditions in the labor world is already well underway, according to the letter, and it is freely predicted that from this time on the number of unemployed will rapidly decrease. It is pointed out that increased orders for home consumption, the opening, conversion or equipment of factories for the making of goods previously bought in Europe and the receipt of heavy supplies from the belligerent nations are the causes which are contributing to the reduction of the number of unemployed. In part the letter says: "Within a fortnight enough mills have resumed or increased their working forces to re-employ 25 per cent of the idle, and it is safe to assume that not more than 25 per cent of the mills usually employed in the heavy manufacturing lines is idle at this writing, with good prospects of further reduction being decreased daily. Among those concerns which have been favored with heavy orders from the nations at war, many are operating at full capacity and some working twenty-four hours a day for the first time in their history. "Commercially, we have not yet felt to any extent the great change in sentiment which has come about during the month, but the change has been distinctly felt in financial circles. The most potent factor in bringing the improvement was the opening of the Federal reserve banks and the release for use in financial operations of hundreds of millions of dollars in reserves. The amount released in the New York banks alone reaching more than $155,000,000. While it will take a portion of these reserves to retire the clearing-house certificates which have been used between banks, the effect of the use of the rediscount privilege by the banks must soon be felt throughout the business world."

ORPHANAGE DID NOT BREAK FIRE ESCAPE LAW

Charge Preferred Against Salem Institution and Roanoke College, in Dismissal.

Because of the dormitory of the Baptist Orphanage at Salem, is only three stories above ground, officers of that institution, who appeared in the Mayor's Court, Salem, yesterday morning to answer the charge of failure to comply with the State fire escape law, deposed the case successfully. The charge was dismissed. The law requires fire escapes to be installed on all buildings more than three stories high. The charge against Roanoke College was also dismissed, the same defense being offered. Inspector J. Bernard Clinebinst, who prosecuted the cases for the State Department of Labor, contended that the structural formation of the buildings indicated that each was a four-story building, but it was contended by the defense that they were but three stories above ground. The case of the Roanoke Woman's College, charged with a like violation of the State law, was called, but a continuance until January 15 was granted at the request of the defendant. Convictions were secured in the case yesterday by Inspector Clinebinst in the following cases: J. H. Works, violating the child labor law; fined $25 and costs, amounting to $2.05 imposed upon the plaintiff. Shible Underwriting Company and Salem Ice Cream Corporation, violating the law prohibiting the working of employees more than ten hours a day; fined $5 each with costs, amounting to $3.05 added. Foundry and Machine Company, violating the semimonthly payday law; fined $1, with $3.05 costs added. The case of the Camden Iron Works, charged with violating the semimonthly payday law, was called and continued.
